Interest to an "alcoholic" perspective in Russia periodically that flashes, fades. In many respects as the reason for that the political environment acts. But invariable there is one – understanding both political elite, and scientific community of that unbiased fact that the excessive alcohol drinking bears in itself a large number of negative social, economic and political and legal consequences. In this regard the appeal to the last "moist" law in the USSR is obviously important not only from the point of view of research interest, but also in the pragmatical plan.
