

УДК 94(47).093.2

DOLGOVA A.V., Moscow, Russian Federation

ELIMINATION OF BANDITISM IN THE PERM REGION IN THE DAYS OF THE CIVIL WAR:
RECORDS OF INTERROGATION AND MINUTES OF WITNESS INTERVIEW

Abstract

The article examines criminal activities of the Alikin and Borodulin gangs known for brutal murders and robberies in the Perm region. The article is based on the documents from the Perm archives, the style of which enables criminal profiling. Banditism was rooted in desertion and deficient measures against it. Desertion prevention policies introduced by the authorities caused many a conflict between peasants and Bolsheviks. The end of the Civil War saw an increase in reported murders of Soviet and party workers and peasants in the periphery. At first, deserters used to shelter in some forest close to their native villages, their relatives providing food. When positive misprision of deserters became a punishable offence and deserters were to be sent to the front, the bread grew scarce and the threat of detection increased, as relatives could be watched and reported. These problems deserters solved the in the old-fashioned way by murdering Soviet and party workers, informers and witnesses. Another, more painless and nevertheless effective way was intimidation and terror. Yet another form of banditry was spreading where authority was shaky. Bandits controlled local authorities and locals. Deserters spontaneously formed gangs of bandits not unlike the mafia of the 19th – 20th centuries. Authorities and ordinary people were involved in their activities, which included murder, robbery, rape and blackmail. Indulgence gave bandits free reign, instilling permissiveness and impunity. Peasants still adhered to the shared responsibility known as krugovaya poruka. If a peasant failed to meet requirements of bandits, say, refused to give away bread, money, or some other property, or assisted in a criminal investigation, they would be lynched and outcast.

Download the article: dolgova_doi

Keywords

Source, archive, desertion, peasants, banditism, Civil War, Soviet power, Perm gubernia.

References

1. Buyskiy A. Krasnaya armiya na vnutrennem fronte. Borba s belogvardeiskymi vosstaniyami, povstanchestvom i banditizmom. [The Red Army at the domestic front: Fighting White uprisings, rebellions and banditry]. Moscow – Leningrad, Voenizdat publ., 1929, 95 p.
2. Ovechkin V.V. Dezertirstvo iz Krasnoy armii v gody Grazhdanskoy voyni [Desertion from the Red Army in the days of the Civil War]. Voprosi istorii, no. 3, 2003, pp. 108-115.

3. Obuhov L.A. Prikamiye v gody Grazhdanskoj voyni [The Kama region in the days of the Civil War]. Grazhdanskaya vojna na vostoке Rossiі: materialy Vserossiyskoj nauchnoy konferentsii (g. Perm, 25-26 noyabrya 2008g.) [The Civil War on the East of Russia: Materials of the all-Russian scientific conference]. 2008, pp. 214-220.

4. Osipova T.V. Rossiyskoye krestianstvo v revolutsii i grazhdanskoj voyne [Russian peasantry in the Civil War]. Moscow, Strelets publ., 2001, 400 p.

5. Sazonov V.V. U istokov krestianskogo vosstaniya na Tambovshine [Origins of the peasant uprising in the Tambov region] .Voprosi istorii, no. 4. 2001, pp. 75-83.

About author

Dolgova Angela Valerievna, PhD in History, leading expert at the Federal Service for the Regulation of the Alcohol Market, +7-926-557-68-52, angela_dol@mail.ru

You can read completely article in the russian historic-archival magazine “The Herald of an Archivist”. Read more about terms of subscription here .

Полностью материал публикуется в российском историко-архивоведческом журнале ВЕСТНИК АРХИВИСТА. Ознакомьтесь с условиями подписки здесь .